229.500€

This individually designed two-bedroom cortijo of 120m², with a stream forming one border and nestled in a sheltered valley with plenty of sunshine, is situated between the villages of Murtas and Cojáyar. Access is via a well-maintained track, so it is private and not overlooked. This off-grid property would be perfect for someone wanting to be self-sufficient as there is no shortage of water and the current owner is actively farming the 14000m² land.

The property was formerly a flour mill and many of the original rooms and features are still present.

The cortijo consists of a wide entrance hall leading to two double bedrooms with space for wardrobes etc. Each bedroom has doors opening to the rear terrace. Also accessed from the hall is a large family bathroom with a shower over the corner bath, a walk-in pantry, and the entrance to the open plan kitchen/dining area. A fitted wood burner in the hall also heats the living room. The bedrooms and bathroom have gas fired central heating.

The kitchen is light and airy, has fitted units, a gas hob, plenty of worktop space and a freestanding wood burner. The feature circular dining area has fixed stone seating surrounding the central dining table. Through a brick arch is the living area with a corner office space under another arch. Both the living room and kitchen have double doors leading onto a large wrap around veranda with grape vines growing overhead. In the corner is a tiled basin with running spring water. The views of the valley and surrounding mountains are stunning from here.

The old mill, 130m², comprises of several rooms under the house, one of which is currently used as a workshop. The mill room has two original grinding stones. The stone water course way still exists and is a prominent feature. Next to the house, above the mill is a roofed, two roomed ruin. There is also a large, covered hanger for storing machinery. Behind the house is a quirky part brick and part wooden chalet incorporating a caravan as the sleeping quarters. The chalet has a fitted kitchen area and shower room.

The garden immediately around the house is fenced and gated, has established citrus trees and an ancient olive press (in working order) used as a garden table with benches. The remaining land has numerous terraced areas, with variety of established trees including olive, almond, fig, citrus, pomegranate, grape vines, hazelnuts, and other young fruit
