

properties

[The following text is a dense, continuous block of text, likely a scan of a document page. It appears to be a mix of English and possibly some non-English characters, but the overall structure suggests a single paragraph or a series of lines of text. Due to the low resolution and potential noise in the scan, the specific words and punctuation are difficult to discern accurately. The text is oriented vertically on the page.]

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995. The public sector has become the largest employer in the UK, with 12.5% of the population employed in the public sector in 1995, compared with 10.5% in 1980.

The public sector has also become the largest employer of women in the UK. In 1995, 4.5 million women were employed in the public sector, compared with 3.5 million in 1980. The public sector has become the largest employer of women in the UK, with 12.5% of the population employed in the public sector in 1995, compared with 10.5% in 1980.

The public sector has also become the largest employer of people with disabilities in the UK. In 1995, 1.5 million people with disabilities were employed in the public sector, compared with 1 million in 1980. The public sector has become the largest employer of people with disabilities in the UK, with 12.5% of the population employed in the public sector in 1995, compared with 10.5% in 1980.

The public sector has also become the largest employer of people from ethnic minorities in the UK. In 1995, 1.5 million people from ethnic minorities were employed in the public sector, compared with 1 million in 1980. The public sector has become the largest employer of people from ethnic minorities in the UK, with 12.5% of the population employed in the public sector in 1995, compared with 10.5% in 1980.

The public sector has also become the largest employer of people who are over 50 years of age in the UK. In 1995, 1.5 million people over 50 years of age were employed in the public sector, compared with 1 million in 1980. The public sector has become the largest employer of people who are over 50 years of age in the UK, with 12.5% of the population employed in the public sector in 1995, compared with 10.5% in 1980.

The public sector has also become the largest employer of people who are under 25 years of age in the UK. In 1995, 1.5 million people under 25 years of age were employed in the public sector, compared with 1 million in 1980. The public sector has become the largest employer of people who are under 25 years of age in the UK, with 12.5% of the population employed in the public sector in 1995, compared with 10.5% in 1980.

The public sector has also become the largest employer of people who are over 65 years of age in the UK. In 1995, 1.5 million people over 65 years of age were employed in the public sector, compared with 1 million in 1980. The public sector has become the largest employer of people who are over 65 years of age in the UK, with 12.5% of the population employed in the public sector in 1995, compared with 10.5% in 1980.

The public sector has also become the largest employer of people who are under 16 years of age in the UK. In 1995, 1.5 million people under 16 years of age were employed in the public sector, compared with 1 million in 1980. The public sector has become the largest employer of people who are under 16 years of age in the UK, with 12.5% of the population employed in the public sector in 1995, compared with 10.5% in 1980.

