Cueva Joana in Gor

Cueva Joana is located on a ridge high above the impressive Gor Canyon in the Granada Geopark. This property faces east-southeast and consists of a large rambling cave house with a massive front patio, a 2-car garage with a workshop, and 1800m² of open land with 650m² fenced area and 4-car carport. The house has a living room, 2 dining rooms, kitchen, a pantry, 3-5 bedrooms and one bathroom. The property has tons of potential as a family home with a workshop, a business, or for tourism.

This cave house is reformed in a traditional Spanish style. The floors are fully tiled. The cave walls are exceptionally thick, providing excellent insulation. The cave house is built in a basic style and can benefit from modernisation and finishing.

You enter the central living room which has a fireplace and leads to 3 spacious cave tunnels. To the right, is a dining area with a second fireplace and the sunny kitchen. Straight back from the dining area is the pantry and a large bedroom. To the left of the living room a hallway leads to the bathroom with a tub.

Straight back from the living room, a tunnel takes you through 3 rooms. These are traditionally considered bedrooms, however they could be an office or study, with a wardrobe and bedroom.

From the living room, another tunnel takes you through the current dining room to a hallway. This hallway leads to a large, bright bedroom at the front of the cave with an entrance that can be opened from the front patio. The hallway also leads to a storage area and to a staircase up to the garage and workshop.
